'Football Planet'

the weekly magazine of the african and international Football

#FootballPlanet

Monday at 20h15 WAT (UTC+1)

For the very latest updates in football in Africa and the rest of the world, FootballPlanet is your reliable weekly programme by Africanews aired every Monday.

Africanews is an independent, multilingual pan-african media that presents the new face of information for a continent on the move.

Football goes beyond sporting performance on the African continent and is an important key for social union. Football planet is the biggest reference point to live from the inside all the news of African and international football.

Every week, Football Planet set Africa's football agenda and lead the discussions on what matters to the beautiful game through reviews, reports, and interviews of experts plus a summary of the week in pictures

Football Planet is also a review of the European football championship and the Football World Cup.

With Football Planet, Juliet Bawuah and her team take you every season and step by step in the heart of the main competitions of the continent: the qualifiers, the rankings, the summaries of the matches as well as the winners.

Football Planet is your authoritative guide to know everything about your favorite team, the African player of the year, the European championship Ballon D'or.

About Juliet Bawuah

@julietbawuah

Ghanaian Journalist Juliet Bawuah is a renowned sports expert in Africa. Every week on Africanews she leads the programme 'Football Planet'. She has also joined the 'Morning Call' team every Friday to present the Sport.

Juliet secured Africanews' first exclusive just one day after the channel was launched, when she interviewed former footballer Georges Weah as he announced his candidacy for the 2017 presidential elections in Liberia.

Juliet Bawuah has worked with a number of media channels including TV3 Ghana, where she covered the World Cup in Brazil in 2014 and in 2015, she presented the magazine on the Africa Cup of Nations. She has worked with Metropolitan Television, E.tv and CITI FM; she has also written for the football website Goal.com and currently writes for cafonline.com, the official website of the African Football Confederation (CAF).

Juliet has a Bachelor of Arts degree in Journalism and Public Relations from the Ghana Institute of Journalism and a Communications Diploma from the African University College of Communications.

About Africanews

Africanews, launched in 2016 (digital in January, TV in April), stands out as the first pan-African multilingual media source produced simultaneously in French and English, and offering coverage of African and global news from a sub-Saharan perspective.

Today, Africanews TV is available in 35 countries across sub-Saharan Africa thanks to major pay-tv players and national channels (partial broadcast). The Africanews signal covers sub-Saharan Africa and the Indian Ocean islands via two satellites: SES 4 and SES 5.

Africanews' digital platforms, available around the world, highlight the challenges and opportunities of a connected Africa:

- africanews.com has a responsive web design suited to all mobile, tablet and computer screens and has the added feature of adapting to the quality of the available connection;

- two YouTube channels (in English and French) and Facebook and Twitter accounts @africanews and @africanewsfr.

Africanews is a 100% Euronews subsidiary financed through advertising and distribution. Africanews adheres to the same editorial charter as its European sister channel, Euronews
